Margaret Bradley-Davis received her B.A. from Florida International University in 1995 and her Certificate in Paralegal Studies from Barry College in 1986. She completed a Certificate in Human Resources Administration at Florida International University in 1997. Ms. Bradley-Davis has 17 years' experience working on litigation matters, including complex class-action litigation.

Ms. Bradley-Davis works exclusively with members of the Labor & Employment Practice Group. She assists with fact investigations by conducting initial witness interviews and reviewing documents. She then prepares a preliminary case summary, including witness statement outlines and chronology. This preliminary investigation is part of the Group's cost-effective method to streamline case handling. She also assists with responding to discovery requests, and organizing exhibits for depositions and trials. Ms. Bradley-Davis also coordinates witness schedules for trial.

Ms. Bradley-Davis has worked on cases involving litigation claims of sexual harassment and discrimination, including age, race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, marital status, as well as worker's compensation retaliation.
